will be given to students with proven experience in the use of RF, MMW or THz systems for the dielectric characterization of biological materials.

Workplan and objectives to be achieved:

The fellow's work plan aims to develop a system that allows the identification of different biological tissues using electromagnetic waves in the THz range. It is expected that advanced techniques will be proposed to advance the state of the art in measuring dielectric properties using software-controlled antenna arrays. To this end, the plan will include studying the interaction of waves with biological tissue, modelling the interaction mechanisms, and proposing technological solutions that allow the use of those mechanisms to obtain the dielectric properties of the tissues. This will involve supervising a team working on 3D FEM modelling, wave generation and detection for THz, and the implementation and characterization of electromagnetic phantoms for THz. Expected results include the collection and analysis of results obtained from numerical and ex-vivo models, the writing of reports, and the writing and submission of scientific articles.

Applicable legislation and regulations: Research Fellow Statute (EBI), approved by Law nº. 40/2004 of August 18, in its current wording and FCT Research Fellowship Regulation, approved by Regulation nº 950/2019, published in the Diário da República, 2nd series, of December 16, 2019, in its current wording, and Scientific Research Fellowship Regulation (RBIC) of the University of Minho, approved by order nº 4998/2025, published in the Diário da República, 2nd series, nº 81, of April 28, 2025 Amended and republished through amendment statement no. 634/2025/2, published in the Official Gazette, 2nd series, no. 132, of July 11.
